SPRINGFIELD — American Eskimo rescue dog Flurry has only one eye, but oh the places she's seen and the people's she's met along her cross-country travels from the front seat of her owner's red Mazda Miata convertible.

Flurry, a jaunty 12-year-old dog, and her owner, Sarah Oulton of Agawam, drove through 48 states in 72 days in the fall of 2014, taking in the sights including such landmarks as Mount Rushmore, the Grand Canyon and the Washington D.C. monuments.

But the trip was much more than a sight-seeing adventure.

It was a journey to raise awareness about the plight of animals like Flurry, who was found in 2007 roaming the streets of New York City with a bloody head and one eyeball hanging by a thread. Along their odyssey, Oulton took photos, conducted research and met with animal advocates around the country in preparation for a book she is writing.

The best of the hundreds of photographs Oulton took of Flurry along their road trip are destined to appear in an animal law book Oulton, a 2012 Western New England University Law School graduate, is writing with co-authors Mark and Andrea Baer. Mark is a real estate investor and Andrea is a teacher in the public schools in their hometown of Framingham.

Oulton, who is co-founder of the Animal Law Association at the law school, said 100 percent of proceeds from the sale of the book will go to three organizations providing shelter and rescue services for animals and to Western New England's law school to fund a chair in animal law.

"Everywhere we went, people were so helpful," she said, adding that once they understood that she was writing a book to raise animal issues, they sent her to the front of the line to pose Flurry for her portfolio.

Armed with her AAA road map, little time was spent in any one place, with Oulton and Flurry spending nights in pet-friendly hotels and truck stops that had showers.

The folks at Balise Mazda helped sponsor the trip, getting Oulton's Miata in shape for the 17,164 miles it took her to accomplish the journey and providing on-call services should any problems arise.

"They made me feel like they were in the trunk," she said on Balise's website. "I felt like I knew they had my back and that's what made it OK."

Fast friends made at the start of her adventure and along the way include Lisa Vanderpump, British philanthropist and star of "Vanderpump Rules" and "The Housewives of Beverly Hills" and Patricia Altschul, star of "Southern Charm."

Vanderpump heard about Flurry and invited Oulton to bring the dog to her book-signing in 2011 in New York City. It was Oulton's meeting with Vanderpump where the idea for cross-country idea was hatched with Vanderpump's encouragement. "It all started there," Oulton said. "Lisa is such a wonderful person and animal lover."

One of Flurry's photos was taken at Lisa's star on the Palm Springs Walk of Stars and along the trip the pair met several other stars of the "Housewives" series in other cities.

The pair spent what Oulton called "a magical day" at Altschul's historic mansion. While there, they visited a Huguenot Church in Charleston for a "Blessing of the Animals" event that coincided with Flurry's visit.

Oulton said she came back from her trip buoyed by the sense of kindness and generosity she experienced along the way.

Flurry was rescued by Manhattan Animal Control and had eye surgery financed by the kindness of donors.

After two placements with owners that didn't fit, Oulton was looking on "Eskies Online" to find a companion for her aging American Eskimo dog, Powder.

The match was a winner. "Even a rescue dog with a traumatic history and a failed placement can become well-trained," she said.

Oulton has been animal-lover since she was a child. She adopted a rescue dog – an "eskie" like Flurry – as a teenager. She worked at shelters and as a veterinarian technician and earned an undergraduate degree in zoology from University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Oulton and her co-authors are half-way through writing their animal law book and are talking with two potential publishers. "I hope to be at a book party in the South by next winter," she said.

Before book proceeds begin rolling in, Oulton has set up a crowd funding GoFundMe in the hopes of raising funds for her causes sooner rather than later.

Flurry's web site is www.oneeyedflurry.org

And the proposed cover for the new animal law book? A picture of Flurry on the steps of the U.S. Supreme Court, of course.

Taylor is an amazing, kind-hearted little kid, and her group is one of the project's beneficiaries. She and her family devote their hearts and souls to making the world better for animals and people, so we partnered with the Callahan family to keep the good work moving forward. Sarah Oulton is an inspiration to all animal lovers. And Flurry is one lucky dog. Sarah's creating a web site www.OneEyedFlurry.com for her charity that will benefit 3 animal shelter rescue organizations and help fund a chair in Animal Law at Western New England University Law School. Check out her GoFundMe page. Such a worthy cause.
